TWENTY20 CUP CRICKET IS BACK

Twenty20 Cup all set to heat up

Is there any limits to what Twenty20 can do? The answer is probably not, with this year's competition continuing the trend of improved competition, scores, and excitement.

The last round of group games scheduled for this Friday not only contains sell-outs galore but also consists of two winner-takes-all shootouts and a desperately close race to qualify as one of two best third-placed finishers.

The main spotlight will undoubtedly focus on the two sudden death games - Nottinghamshire and Yorkshire at Trent Bridge and Essex and Hampshire at Chelmsford, the scene of Graham Napier's savage record breaking 152-not out earlier this week.

Somerset saw their campaign come to an agonisingly premature end on Thursday when they were rained off against Northamptonshire in the Midlands/West/Wales Division, handing the Steelbacks the point they needed to join Warwickshire in securing a quarter-final berth.

Other counties sitting pretty having confirmed a place in the last eight are Durham and Lancashire from the North Division, along with Middlesex from the South Division.

The race for the remaining place encompasses the second and third placed finishers in the South Division, which will either be the loser of the clash at Chelmsford or Kent should they beat Sussex at Hove.

All this leads us into the quarter-finals and eventually Finals Day - held this year at the Rose Bowl and already resoundingly sold out of its general allocation.

Early front runners for a spot in last four must be Warwickshire, yet to taste defeat in their nine outings and looking in ominous form.

However both Durham and Lancashire, who boast a fully fit Andrew Flintoff, look dangerous prospects for who ever they should encounter in the knock-out stages.

Surprise South Division leaders Middlesex will also hoping to progress to the last four but will face the disadvantage of having to play their quarter-final home tie at the Oval due to a fixture clash at Lord's.
